

TECHDIGEST The UK and Europe's premier site for news, reviews and opinion on consumer electronics and gadgets

Reviews Mobile phones Top stories Video Reviews HDTV Music players

The all-new Mazda2 coming soon

« projectiondesign m80 - serious home cinema | Main | Onkyo unveils four THX-certified AV receivers »
Unison iX5 piano finish speaker system - iPod speakers with a kick

There are plenty of iPod-friendly speakers around, but most wouldn't fill a hamster cage with sound. That's not the case with the Unison iX5 piano finish speaker system.

These are 70w speakers, using superior cone bass drivers for deep bass, silk dome tweeters for smoother highs and built-in power amplifiers. They also feature hand-crafted wood enclosures with a high-gloss piano finish and an iPod dock for charging and syncing your player. And if you haven't got an Apple player, there's connectivity for up to two other music sources and a built-in amplifier, so you don't need to hook one up.

Controlled by remote, you can pick up the Unison iX5 speaker system for £249.

Find out more

Related posts:
 Opinion: Should Apple extend their new family with touchscreen, Intel-based, OS X laden iPods?
 Kensington FK500 Speaker To Go - portable sounds
 Get set for Apple's Yellow Submarine Beatles iPod
 Came straight to this page? Visit www.TechDigest.tv for all the latest news.

Posted by modculture on July 16, 2007 in iPod | Pmalink

Shiny Sites
 Games Digest
 HDTV UK
 iPhone
 Mobile Digest
 PSP PSP
 Shiny Shiny
 Tech Digest

For all the latest deals. Click here.

Videos
 IFA 2007: The Philips press conference video
 Sony Director: Rudy Probst, CEO of Philips, talks Aurea
 Sony Video Review: Sound Master Party Blu Speakers and Dock
 Sony Video Review: Eson Wind-up Radio, Torch and Charger
 Video Review: Fujifilm Finepix Digital Camera

Popular Stories
 13 tech-related product placements in The Bourne Ultimatum
 Top five left-handed gadgets for Left Handed Day 2007
 Built to last? Panasonic high definition plasma TVs will last at least 82 years
 Apple unveils new factor, sleeker iMac
 Opinion: Has anyone NOT tried to use Google over YouTube yet? Here is a must!

« projectiondesign m80 - serious home cinema | Main | Onkyo unveils four THX-certified AV receivers »
Unison iX5 piano finish speaker system - iPod speakers with a kick

There are plenty of iPod-friendly speakers around, but most wouldn't fill a hamster cage with sound. That's not the case with the Unison iX5 piano finish speaker system.

These are 70w speakers, using superior cone bass drivers for deep bass, silk dome tweeters for smoother highs and built-in power amplifiers. They also feature hand-crafted wood enclosures with a high-gloss piano finish and an iPod dock for charging and syncing your player. And if you haven't got an Apple player, there's connectivity for up to two other music sources and a built-in amplifier, so you don't need to hook one up.

Controlled by remote, you can pick up the Unison iX5 speaker system for £249.

techdigest.tv
 August 2007