

WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION

CLICK HERE NOW

NO.1 FOR NEWS, CHAT & OPINIONS

LATEST TELEVISIONS HOME CINEMA HI-FI MP3 DEALERS FORUMS

SEARCH in MP3 GO

MP3
NEWS: Unison adds a standalone dock to its iPod range
Aug 15, 2007

Having launched its £250 i-X5 iPod speaker system a month ago, Unison is now freeing the dock supplied with that system for use with a wider range of equipment. The Australian company's i-XD will sell for £50, and comes complete with remote control and cables to charge your iPod and feed sound and vision to an amplifier or system.

The dock comes with four iPod inserts, allowing it to be used with G5 iPod video 30, 60 & 80GB, iPod nano G1 & iPod nano G2 models, and the remote control will work from up to 12m away. USB, analogue phono and S-video cables are provided, along with a power adapter, and the unit comes in gloss black or white to match your iPod.

of the (below), partnered with a pair of speakers combining 16.5cm paper cone mid/bass units and 25mm soft-dome tweeters, powered by what's described as '70W biamp dynamic power' amplification.

The Unison products, made by Melbourne-based Cygnett, are available from Cygnett's own online shop, AskDirect, Rankhour.com and iPodWorld.

Technorati Tags: iPod dock, MP3, Unison by Cygnett

About Andrew Everard

Andrew Everard, Audio Editor of Gramophone since November 1999, read English at Queens' College, Cambridge a very long time ago! He started his journalistic career in 1982 on Haymarket's photographic magazines, and subsequently worked on What Hi-Fi?, High Fidelity, Audiophile and Home Cinema magazines, as well as contributing a monthly column to Japanese title HiVi. He is currently deputy editor of What Hi-Fi? Sound and Vision's Ultimate Guides series.

Stuff tv

MP3 NEWS: Unison adds a standalone dock to its iPod range

Aug 15, 2007

Having launched its £250 i-X5 iPod speaker system a month ago, Unison is now freeing the dock supplied with that system for use with a wider range of equipment. The Australian company's i-XD will sell for £50, and comes complete with remote control and cables to charge your iPod and feed sound and vision to an amplifier or system.

The dock comes with four iPod inserts, allowing it to be used with G5 iPod video 30, 60 & 80GB, iPod nano G1 & iPod nano G2 models, and the remote control will work from up to 12m away. USB, analogue phono and S-video cables are provided, along with a power adapter, and the unit comes in gloss black or white to match your iPod.

It can also be bought as part of the complete i-X5 system (below), partnered with a pair of speakers combining 16.5cm paper cone mid/bass units and 25mm soft-dome tweeters, powered by what's described as '70W biamp dynamic power' amplification.

The Unison products, made by Melbourne-based Cygnett, are available from Cygnett's own online shop, AskDirect, Rankhour.com and iPodWorld.

Technorati Tags: iPod dock, MP3, Unison by Cygnett

whayhifi.com
August 2007